

The Evolutionary Worldview

Knowledge of truths about the cosmos, nature and relationships, is purposeful in helping one relate more honestly with oneself, nature and each other. Ignorance of natural truths limits us from becoming better persons, namely, persons more self-fulfilled and more effective in relating with each other and nature.

If “e-consciousness” (evolutionary consciousness) is not the reality-consciousness of the world that informs us, and if it is worldview-consciousness that best informs us about ourselves, nature, and all other, then we are living by a worldview that is less authentic, less informative of ourselves, nature and all other.

If our upbringing has been Christian it is likely that the framework of our ethical/ practical belief is built on the Genesis Creation Story, biblical literalism and a static-centric worldview. While the myths of Scripture convey important religious truths, they do not inform us in evolution. This is where science and reason enter the picture, namely, to deepen and update perspectives on religious truths and to better inform us in relating to all other.

The 2000 SUMMARY PREVISION introduces urgent moral and practical issues of the times and makes the case for personal involvement as a cosmic citizen, an Earth citizen, a religious citizen and civil citizen.

The Global THINKING Community puts one in mind of human awareness as citizens of the different communities, dependent on and responsibilities to each other. Relating to all other involves first and foremost, communication. The essays presented here are taken from the <http://www.ncrcafe.org> website. Many other subjects are there beyond those presented here. Joining website discussions can expand one’s horizons. Your participation can expand the horizons of others.

The Joined Faith/Evolution Syllabus is intended for self-study and improvement, and for group-study, whether church-group, or other. The need for greater interpersonal knowledge is urgent to wellbeing. You can help others become better by encouraging them to expand their knowledge of evolutionary consciousness. All can do this together by “surfing the green wave”, and together deepening consciousness and conscience. Please consider forming a discussion group in your parish, community. Thank you.
